

Happy National Nurses Day!

Get Well Map Foundation wants to send a big, warm shout out to nurses everywhere! This year it is more important than ever that we express our gratitude to those individuals who devote their lives to healing the sick. Nurses, you are the glue that holds our medical system together. Thank you for sacrificing so much each and everyday.

Did you know that our founders mother-in-law and our OT intern's mom have both been nurses for over 40 years?! Whether you love a nurse at home, or know a nurse that has made a special impact in your health or the care of a loved one, take a few moments to thank a nurse today!

And don't forget... In honor of Teacher Appreciation Week, Get Well Map Foundation, through donation from Child Inspired Therapy, is GIVING AWAY 5 Goal Map Notepad Sets to 5 Teachers. Teachers understand the developmental learning needs of children, and know how visual tools can improve comprehension and motivate children to stay on track with their goals! Redeem for yourself, OR nominate an inspiring teacher close to your heart that might benefit from additional resources in their classroom.

In honor of Teacher appreciation Week National Nurses Day, this week's featured blogpost highlights the importance of collaboration and communication during transition from a healthcare setting, following a medical event, back to school. As parents, friends, educators and health care professionals, we can collaborate with one another to help make the healthcare-school transition safer, less anxiety provoking, and more successful for students that are facing medical challenges, their families, and their classmates.
